

The Prentice Boy

As down through Cu - pid's gar - den for plea - sure I did walk, I

3 heard two loy - als lov - ers most sweet - ly for to talk. It being an hon - ored la - dy and

6 her ap - pren - tice boy. And in se - cret they were talk - ing for he was all her joy.

He says, "Dear honored lady, I am your 'prentice boy
How can I e'er expect a fair lady to enjoy?"
With cheeks as red as roses, her manner kind and free,
She says, "Dear lad, if e'er I wed, I will surely marry thee."

But when her father came to know, the same to understand
He had this young man banished unto a foreign land.
And, as she lay broken-hearted these words was heard to say
"For my honest, charming 'prentice a maid I'll live and die."

This young man to a merchant a waiting-man was bound
And by his good behavior great fortune there he found.
Soon he became a butler, which prompted him to fame
And by his careful conduct his steward he became.

For a ticket in a lottery the money he paid down
And there he gained a fortune of full five thousand pounds;
With store of gold and silver he packed his clothes indeed
And to England he returned to his own true love with speed.

He offered kind embraces, but she flew from his arms
Saying, "No Lord or Nobleman shall e'er enjoy my charms,
The love of gold is cursed, great riches I decry
For my honest, charming 'prentice a maid I'll live and die."

He says, "Dear honored lady, you have been in these arms,
This is the ring I gave you in token of your charms;
You vowed if e'er you married your charms I should enjoy,
Your father did me banish, I am your 'prentice boy."

When she beheld his features she flew into his arms
With kisses and embraces she did enjoy his charms;
And then through Cupid's garden a road to church they found
And there in virtuous pleasure in Hymen's chains were bound.
